Exposed: The Truth About Radiation

Americans face 90% exposure this winter.
Dedicated to outstanding people who have made extremely unimportant contributions to society, this page honors Robert Harrison—Editor of Confidential

HUMBUG HERO OF MONTH

Judges: Ebenezer Scrooge & Jacob Marley
"I'll take the Sportingman type... any time!"

Rugged after shave lotion with a he-man aroma duplicating sweating lumberjack-scent. Much more he-manish than a tattoo on the hand.
HUGE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

In a series of gigantic publicity moves, Humbug has contacted disc jockeys the country over requesting plugs from them on their shows in return for plugs we will give them. In one week alone, we sent out 300 rubber bathtub plugs.

Also, we have watched with interest the publicity campaign of a fellow magazine, the Saturday Evening Post, where they announced on a series of handsome posters in headline type, THE INFLUENTIAL IS COMING. The posters, large photographs, depicted the silhouette of a smart executive (an S.E.P. reader) striding importantly through airports, railroad stations and fancy offices. Boldly following on the heels of this idea—in other words stealing it—we printed our own posters announcing THE INCONSEQUENTIAL IS COMING; (the Humbug reader)

We are displaying these posters on the sides of abandoned houses, walls of rest rooms, and wherever else we can paste them without being caught. It won't be long now. Soon, all the inconsequentials will band together under the new Humbug banner into one large group. Together, we inconsequentials will become influential—and then—then we get rid of the influential.

By the next issue we'll be ready to start a letter column, gang, so keep 'em coming.

Harvey Kurtzman
Editor

THE INCONSEQUENTIAL IS COMING

HUMBUG poster

TABLE OF CONTENTS

THE FISHTAIL ................ 1
REVERSE CLICHES .... 3
AROUND THE DAYS .... 5
SOMETHING OF MAU MAU .... 6

BASEBALL HEXES ................. 11
VACATION TIME .......... 14
NIGHT AT THE CASTLE .... 19
OFFENSIVE .................. 21

MY FAIR SADIE ................. 23
BLECHMAN ................. 26
TELEVISION BUGS ............ 27
TIRED BLOOD ............... 31
THE FISHTAIL

Working tirelessly to please our insatiable appetites for longer, sleeker, more advanced car design—design that we the public want—the auto industry has come up with the Fishtail. We wanted it, and we got it. And now that we've got it, the auto industry is trying to figure out what we can do with it. The following are HUMBUG's suggestions of what we can do with it.

Fishtail, viewed from rear, reveals lengthy sweep, viewed from side, reveals lengthy sweep (see inset) as illusion.

FIN GIVE STABILITY (at 80 mph). No tumbling action as car misses the turn.

EXTRA STORAGE is had by jamming picnic lunches, etc., up into Fishtail.

PUNCHING HOLE in Fishtail can with Fishtail point is very handy in picnics.

SLICING BALONEY etc. is also convenient and easy on ridge of Fishtail.

NO BENT FENDERS. Wire backing into rear of garage shears through clean.

TRUEST LIE is truth. Puncturing action in water (lifeboat) allows escape.
REVERSE CLICHES
by Arnold Benson

I could like aimless conversation if once in a while, somebody would say:

"When I was a boy, we never had winters as bad as this"

"They're making everything much better than they used to"

"How did a wonderful girl like you get to be so successful in this business?"

"He was a hard man to work for, but he never knew what he wanted"

"Funny thing about colored people. They just can't seem to sing or dance."

"The trouble with me is, I always keep blurting out falsehoods."

"Isn't Prince wonderful? Sometimes he's almost canine."

"I never made any money, but I never got cluttered up with a lot of friends either."

"When I think of some of the officers we had, I know why we won the war."

"I may get a little careless once in a while, but I miss deadlines all the time."
"This is just a phase that's permanent."

"She's not very good looking, but what a God-awful dancer."

"I'm a drinking man myself, and I hate people who do."

"We never have any money, and we're miserable and fighting all the time."

"I may do a little sociable drinking on occasion, but mostly I just get drunk."

"One thing about me. I have absolutely no sense of humor."

"He may not look like much, but he's one of the dumbest bastards I've ever met."

"Women always look worse to me after a couple of drinks."

"I know everything there is to know about art, I just don't know what I like."

"It's easier for a rich man to get into heaven than any of you guys."

"They won't think up anything next."

"She's ugly as a mud fence, and she's no fun at all."

"I don't like bullfighting much, but I love the business about the horses."

"I trust Joe. He never looks you in the eye."

"None of my friends are Jewish."

"I don't care if a joke is funny, as long as it's dirty."

"How come you keep running into me darling, just when I'm looking at my absolute best."
Above is a small part of the cast you'll see in AROUND THE DAYS IN 80 WORLDS.

Who isn't familiar with the Jules Verne classic, the story of Phileas Fogg who, with his valet, Passepartout, goes around the world in 80 days on a bet in the Nautilus with Capt. Nemo. To film this classic, Mike Todd hired a cast of thousands of nothing but stars, and filmed an extravaganza in Toddy A-OO-AH-EE wide screen, bringing movie talkies a step closer to jeekes.

Cocktail, Sir? Fantastic, Sir? You say a trip around the world in 80 days is fantastic?

No! There goes Rock Hudson! One line! That's fantastic!

Don't be a fool Fogg! It cannot be done!

If you will wager your 5000 pound supper quid, I will be off in the morning to prove my point.

It's a wager! You are a Fogg fool!
Tell you what Captain. I'll buy the boat and we'll chop it up for fuel.

Surely there is wood somewhere in those vast expanses.

Have you searched both ends of the Toddy-A-AH-E-O wide screen?

I'm sorry, Mr. Fogg! We've run out of fuel. We can't find another scrap of wood in the box! We'll never make it to England in time!

All right! Chop up the furniture, superstructure, masts, and throw them in the furnace!

Dismantle the funnel, boys and throw it in the furnace!

Now the cabins, the decks—Hop to it boys and throw them in the furnace!
Aha, gentlemen—that is true but nevertheless, in going round the earth, I caught up with the international dateline. So although I got here Sunday, it was actually only Saturday.

In other words, I have not arrived yet and actually I do not exist.

By Jove, it’s true. He doesn’t exist!

Lemon squash, Sir?

Fantastic! It’s fantastic!

A- bout Fogg mean?

No No! There goes, Mario Brandon! I live! Truly fantastic!
Chapter One

Parker Kensing stepped onto the veranda of his home in Kenya, Africa, and surveyed the remains of his family. "So the bloody Mau Mau were here," he sighed.

"Oh yes," said his father, Leonard Kensing. "They disemboweled your little nephew, drew and quartered your brother-in-law, Jeb, and let me see... what else..."

"Land sakes, father," said Parker's sister, Eliza, laughing, and shaking him good-naturedly, "can't you ever get it right? It was Jeb who was disemboweled and the boy who was drawn..."
and quartered?"

"If I live to be a hundred" said Leonard Kensing, shaking his head and smiling. "I'll never get that straight Jeb—dismembered Boy—drawn and quartered Jeb—dismembered Boy.

Parker sat down in a chair "Eliza, where is my favorite Siamese cat, Marvin?" he asked "I would like to impale him on my panga!"

His sister went inside and brought out the animal. Parker stabbed him, lifted him into the air, and sliced him from chin to spleen. Then, as he wiped his blade clean, he saw in a corner of the porch a young girl he hadn't noticed before. His thoughts suddenly rushed back 11 years when he and his servant, Kimono (now his most bitter enemy, and leader of the Mau Mau) played with a short girl with red hair, freckles, and braces on her crooked teeth. This girl on the porch somehow reminded him of that girl. But time had done something to her. She had blossomed forth into womanhood. Now she was a tall girl with red hair, freckles, and braces on her crooked teeth."

"I say," said Parker, "you bloody well remind me of Hilly Kief, a girl I once knew 11 years ago. Let's get married."

"You've been working too hard hunting Mau Mau, Parker." she said "We ARE married."

He shrugged his shoulders. Suddenly he flashed at the air. "Bloody fly!" he growled, lashing all about him. The insect alighted on the railing and Parker caught it with a panther-like swipe. "Tell me, sir," he said to his father, removing the fly's head and carefully cutting it into three parts. "Did my old friend, Kimono, have anything to do with this raid?"

"I don't know, son," said Leonard Kensing, reaching over to pluck out the fly's wings. "Couldn't you see?" asked Parker, snapping off the legs and setting fire to the tiny stump, while the fly still lived.

"No," said Leonard Kensing, reaching for more of Parker's fly. "It was too dark."

Parker wallop'd his father in the teeth with a nut-cracker and quickly kneed him in the groin. "Find your own damned fly," he said.

Parker went to bed. He must get an early start, hunting Kimono in the morning.

Chapter Two

The oath-taking ceremony was about to begin in the glade near the small punk fire. While waiting for the leader to arrive, Kimono paced up and down in front of his squad. "You call your-
CHARMS AND HEXES

Baseball players believe that luck plays a very big part in the game.

Baseball players are often accused of being superstitious. This just isn't so. They're just intelligent enough not to take any unnecessary chances by offending Lady Luck.

That is why every ballplayer has some sort of gimmick for good luck. Some always wear the same lucky glove, sock, or underwear in a game. Others carry their favorite lucky charms, coins, tobacco plugs, photographs, etc. Still others will go through some motion for luck, like tapping out 'V' for victory on home plate before batting, squeezing the resin bag before pitching, or rubbing dirt into their hands before fielding.

But you may say, this can't possibly always work for everyone everytime. If it did, then the hitters would always hit 1.000, pitchers would pitch nothing but no-hitters, and fielders would never make an error. The simple scientific explanation of why this does not happen is that there exists another, more powerful force that must be reckoned with: THE HEX!

Hexers can be found almost everywhere, and some of them can dish up mighty strong medicine. Indeed they have to, in order to be effective against some of the great stars of the game whose good luck charms are known to be the finest in baseball.

On the following pages we will show some extraordinary shots of great hexers in action. A word of caution, overexposure to hexes may have weird consequences. So do not stare too long at pictures.

THE PAPER BLOWOUT RAZZMATAZZ HEX

Willie Maze always pounds his glove exactly five times to insure his good fortune when making outfield plays. His good luck move certainly pays off as anyone can attest to after seeing one of his brilliant catches.

But when an enemy fan in the stands gives him the Blowout Razzmatazz, the results are usually disastrous.
Robert Robin, one of our pitching all time greats, will always touch certain parts of his uniform for luck.

They will deadly accuracy he mows down the batters as though they were sitting ducks in a shooting gallery.

But the Whammy gets him very confused. He pitches without the ball a balk is called and the run scores.

THE NEEDLING NEWSMAN HEX

Ted Williams, the famous non-pitching spitter always expectorates greedily into his palms before batting.

The good luck that it brings him is evident in the tremendous base hits this great slugger gets as a result.

But when the Needling Newsman Hex is on him, then Ol' Theodore taps gentle pop-ups into waiting gloves.
THE TWO HANDED HECKLE

Mr Shortstop" Pete Weh Roeth gets his luck by always fielding those grounders while he’s on his right foot.

Then even if he’s off balance, it’s a simple matter for him to fire a lightning like peg to erase the runner.

But with the Two Handed Heckle on, he forgets his right hand from his left and the runner is easily safe.

THE GREAT HOODOO VOODOO ANTI BUNTING HEX

When Mickey Manuel bunts he’s so fast that he always has the time to give his bat a friendly boot for good luck.

Then, while fumbling opponents grasp vainly for the erratically bouncing ball Mickey glides safely to first.

But with the Hoodoo Voodoo on him the Mighty Mickey does the fumbling and can’t get anywhere near first.
Humbug has prepared the following article to help you decide whether you want to vacation at home or abroad.

Abroad foreign governments print alluring travel posters hoping to part American travellers from the few dollars they have gleaned by lying on their income-tax returns. Usually some ordinary scene is pictured instead of the actual charm, grace and beauty of their countries. Here we present our revised designs to convince the hesitant tourist.
COME TO JORDAN
AND LIVE LIKE A KING

MERRIE OLDE ENGLAND

LE GRAND LAND OF GRACIOUS LIVING
SAUDI-ARABIA

KASHMIR INDIA AWAITS YOU

SEE THE SIGHTS OF ROME

SAIL TO ISRAEL
THROUGH THE ROMANTIC GULF OF AQABA

merrie olde ENGLAND

petrol rations

STIMULATING REPRODUCTIONS FOR YOU WHO'LL VACATION ABROAD.

THROUGH A MAN'S EYE

GULF OF AQABA

DUO FEATURE TODAY

CINEMA
VACATION-TIME stimulating scenes for you who'll vacation in U.S.A.

RESORT LIFE IN THE DAYTIME... Vacationers thrill to splendor of nature's majestic great outdoors.

RESORT LIFE IN THE NIGHTTIME... Quaint resort towns, rich historically, stir intellectual interest.
A practical guide for vacationers ON A BUDGET

See America first! A low cost vacation awaits the clever traveler with a cheap nature. Expensive transportation, equipment and clothing can be avoided by imaginative application of simple shortcuts (such as stealing, etc.) as shown below.

FOR TRAVEL — $10.40
- Baseball cap 35¢
- War surplus sunglasses 15¢
- Cheap coat 85¢
- Bermuda shorts (borrowed) 0¢
- Sneaky knees (your own) 0¢
- Socks (optional) 10¢
- Bandage $1.00

FOR DINNER — $1.00
- Surplus dress hat 35¢
- Air corps goggles 9¢
- Expensive cigar 10¢
- A $1.50 blanket 5¢ in wool
- Formal length
  - Bermuda short 0¢
  - Socks (a must) 10¢
- Evening sandals 25¢

Ideal route, Gas = $75.00, Traffic tickets = $200.00.

Foot is easily procured. Fines range from $5.00 to $10.00.

Stops, start in cost time, gas. Stop only when necessary.

Telephone 50 miles.

Join an auto club. A phone call brings help. Cost = 10¢.

Ernie staying home is fun when imagination is employed.
A NIGHT AT THE CASTLE

By Alex Atkinson

Noel Coward is reported to be writing a comedy about Disraeli, in which he wants Groucho Marx to appear. I had the same idea some years ago, but was too shy to do anything about it. To keep the record straight, I give below the closing scene of my second act. Mr. Coward is welcome to any or all of it. The scene should be played at breakneck speed and Disraeli should have horn-rimmed glasses, a cutaway coat and a grease paint moustache.

Night in October, 1875, Queen Victoria is seated at piano in a room at Windsor Castle, humming nostalgically as she plays a few hits from musicals of the early part of the century. She is dressed in black. Presently she frowns, and stops playing.

Victoria: There is something odd about this pianoforte.

Disraeli (inside the piano): You're telling me! Every time you press the clutch I get a crack on the shin.

Victoria (opening the piano): Mr. Disraeli! How dare you enter our pianoforte at this time of night?

Disraeli: You mean to tell me it's not open yet? (He climbs out, and dusts himself with the end of her shawl.) It's an outrage! It's getting now so a man can't go into his favorite piano when he wants. (He shakes the shawl, and a moth flies out) Aha! So we are not alone!

Victoria: Mr. Disraeli——

Disraeli (flicking cigar ash into her crown and leering): Call me Ben.

Victoria: Certainly not!

Disraeli (jumping into her lap): Ah, come on now, Victrola. What about that night of burning passion when you winked at me behind your fan?

Victoria: We had a smut in our eye.

Disraeli: Yes—and that book you were reading didn't look any too clean, either.

Victoria (indignantly): That was dear Mr. Tennyson's Maud!

Disraeli: That dope? What's he got that I can't steal? (Going down on his knees) Victrola, you can't let old Alf Tanglewhiskers come be—between us! You know I love you for yourself alone! (Aside) Well—that and the Crown Jewels (To her) Why don’t we throw discretion to the winds and give those guys at Eton something to talk about?

VICTORIA We have a lot of needlework to do.

DISRAELI (rising, prowling about distractedly): Interruptions—always interruptions! If it’s not needlework it’s famine in Ireland (He picks up a decanter of Madeira and drains it) (Spluttering) Have you been standing daft-dills in this?

VICTORIA (alarmed) Mr Disraeli, we don’t like the look of you! How are things with the Empire?

DISRAELI I don’t know, but they tell me they’re booked solid at the Lyceum.

The door opens, and CHICO looks in expectantly.

CHICO Psst! Psst!

DISRAELI (suspiciously, to VICTORIA): Why can’t you eat your soup like a lady?

VICTORIA We are not eating soup.

DISRAELI Well somebody is, and I’m not going to rest until I find him (He throws a large sideboard over on its back and begins to ransack it vigorously)

CHICO Psst!

DISRAELI looks up and sees him. Now, boss?

DISRAELI No, no. Later (He hustles CHICO out and shuts the door).

VICTORIA: Whom was that, pray?

DISRAELI That was a Mr. Scrapcheese.

VICTORIA Do we know him?

DISRAELI: Search me. I never heard of him.

VICTORIA: But he just went out.

DISRAELI: Who did?

VICTORIA: Mr. Scrapcheese.

DISRAELI: He did? Well, he’s got his own life to live. I have troubles of my own (He goes down on his knees and takes her hand).

VICTORIA: But why have we never met him?

DISRAELI: That’s easy. He’s been dead for years.

VICTORIA: Then that can’t have been he!

DISRAELI: Are you kidding?

VICTORIA: Oh, Mr Disraeli, you are a droll (She pokes him playfully in the eye with her fan).

DISRAELI: I bet you say that to all the Prime Ministers (He rolls up her sleeve and begins to plant kisses on her arm from the wrist up)

VICTORIA: Aren’t you getting a little too old for this sort of thing?

DISRAELI: That’s your worry, not mine. (He puts an arm around her, knocking her crown askew.)

A LADY-IN-WAITING enters.

LADY-IN-WAITING: Oh—excuse me. I didn’t know there was an orgy on tonight.

DISRAELI: Don’t you ever read the Court Circular, you succulent little man? (He releases VICTORIA and makes a beeline for the LADY-IN-WAITING, taking her in his arms and squeezing her) (Aside) Ah, this is the life! (To the LADY-IN-WAITING) What d’you want, and I hope it’s a rude answer?

LADY-IN-WAITING: Mr Gladstone is at the front door.

DISRAELI: Has he got his bag?

LADY-IN-WAITING: Yes.

DISRAELI: Tell him we’ve got all the brushes we can use (He hustles her out and returns to VICTORIA)

VICTORIA: (putting her crown straight) Did you wish to see us, Mr Disraeli?

DISRAELI: Well, I certainly didn’t come in here to read the meter (He picks her up, puts her on a sofa, jumps up beside her, and leans against her amorously, smoking his cigar) You know, you’re cute. They ought to name a railroad station after you (He tickles her chin. The music of a harp is heard, off)

VICTORIA: (drawing away from him) Hark!

DISRAELI: Now what?

VICTORIA: (guiltily, looking up to heaven) Listen! It’s Albert! He must be angry with us!

DISRAELI: In a pig’s eye it’s Albert! (He hurrises to the window and opens it. Calling) Hey! You down there with the bed-sized banjo! What do you think we are—amused?

Harp music stops. A motor-horn sounds twice.

(TO VICTORIA) Make that six hard-boiled eggs (Calling down again) Get outa here before I fetch a Beefeater!

A lousy sandwich you’d continued... make any-\hspace{2pt} anyway. \hspace{2pt}Here! \hspace{2pt} (He\hspace{2pt} tosses\hspace{2pt} a\hspace{2pt} coin\hspace{2pt} out\hspace{2pt} of\hspace{2pt} the\hspace{2pt} window.)\hspace{2pt} Here's\hspace{2pt} a\hspace{2pt} wooden\hspace{2pt} nickel.\hspace{2pt} Don't\hspace{2pt} take\hspace{2pt} any\hspace{2pt} more! \hspace{2pt} (He\hspace{2pt} shuts\hspace{2pt} the\hspace{2pt} window\hspace{2pt} and\hspace{2pt} returns\hspace{2pt} to\hspace{2pt} the\hspace{2pt} sofa.)\hspace{2pt} I've\hspace{2pt} had\hspace{2pt} just\hspace{2pt} about\hspace{2pt} enough\hspace{2pt} of\hspace{2pt} this.\hspace{2pt} All\hspace{2pt} I\hspace{2pt} crave\hspace{2pt} is\hspace{2pt} a\hspace{2pt} little\hspace{2pt} innocent\hspace{2pt} debauchery,\hspace{2pt} and\hspace{2pt} what\hspace{2pt} do\hspace{2pt} I\hspace{2pt} get? Bedlam! \hspace{2pt} (He\hspace{2pt} sits\hspace{2pt} again\hspace{2pt} and\hspace{2pt} leans\hspace{2pt} against\hspace{2pt} her,\hspace{2pt} closing\hspace{2pt} his\hspace{2pt} eyes.)\hspace{2pt} Ah,\hspace{2pt} that's\hspace{2pt} better. \hspace{2pt} Let\hspace{2pt} me\hspace{2pt} rest\hspace{2pt} my\hspace{2pt} weary\hspace{2pt} head\hspace{2pt} on\hspace{2pt} your\hspace{2pt} Embankment.

Victoria: Mr. Disraeli, we believe you are dallying with us.

Disraeli: (aside) I knew she'd catch on sooner or later. (To her,) My intentions are strictly unmentionable. How are yours? Keeping all right?

Victoria: Affairs of State weigh heavy on our chest.

Disraeli: Pardon me. (He rests his head on her shoulder instead.) Incidentally, not to put too fine a point on it, how are you fixed for canals these days? (He puts his feet upon an inlaid mahogany china-cabinet.)

Victoria: You have one for disposal?

Disraeli: I sure have.

Victoria: How big is it?

Disraeli: That depends. What size do you take?

Victoria: —

Disraeli: It's a deal! Sign here. (He whips a document and a quill pen from his inside pocket.)

Victoria: But wait! We can't sign yet!

Disraeli: Well, make a cross. I'm not fussy.

Victoria: But—where is this canal?

Disraeli: I got it right outside.

Victoria: Will it be safe there?

Disraeli: It hasn't complained up to now. Come on—what am I bid for one canal? Running water both ends—so easy a child can fix it—will not repeat after meals—

Victoria: We could perhaps make you an earl?

Disraeli: Can I take it in cash?

Victoria: Certainly not!

Disraeli: Okay, but you twisted my arm—make me an earl. But make him fast and wrap him up—I want to take him with me.

Chico: Comes in again.

Chico: Now, boss?

Disraeli: Yes—now. (To Victoria) Hold tight, baby. This is your big scene.

He clings to her and she clings to the sofa as Chico holds the door open and the Suez Canal comes in.

---

CURTAIN.
ENGLAND ON THE OFFENSIVE

John Bull’s new “guided-missile” look

THIS AREA FOR OFFICERS ONLY THEATER

Psst! that's Rex Harris town's cue Where is he?

(We can't go on without Rex Harris town)

Ere 'e comes now!

Pity on the audience — since one can hardly get tickets to see this show

By gad! One can hardly get tickets to see this show

...Just because I lost mine, I had to sneak past the ushers!

MY FAIR SADIE

You who were fortunate enough to get tickets to see this Broadway musical may not be aware that the original play was written by a great playwright years ago. Though the author is long dead, the play has been unusually revived, now as a musical with new tunes and lyrics — a hit on Broadway with the record sales running well into the millions — which all goes to again prove that great plays don't sell as well as records.

Spare a penny, gentleman?

Cockney dialect from Soho, London

Ha! ye got a quid mon?

Scotch Welsh from county Thrupenny shire!

Mudja wudja wudja guynner Wudja?

Barry Fitz Gerald from Going My Way

Fantastic Professor Iggin, the way you tell where people come from by their speech

Col Picklestick, speech and back ground are related — and I'll wager that slut flower girl might be a lady but for her speech

I'll take that wager

West Bronx from lower Grant's Con course.
Help! Help! Watch the revolving seat!

Picklestick! Remember the slut at the Convent Garden that I wagered would be a fine lady? Well, I've actually started training her to be a lady. Can you recognise her, old boy?

By Jove, Iggins—she's completely changed! How did you do it?

No, no Picklestick—that's my housekeeper! There's Sadie over there!

Gi-dadda here ya creep!

Now, Sadie, in order to improve your speech, I want you to repeat after me—

She's really got it? I know she's got it.

Do you really think I've got it? Sh! Sh! I'm singing! This is the singing part.

I say— it sounds like you're talking. I sing talking. Well then finish singing. I wait—now I'm talking.

I think she's got it by George, she's got it!

I'll learn to earn more coin to burn.

INTERMISSION*

*HEIMBUN brings you a first—a magazine with an intermission so you can rest in middle of story.
By Jove, who is the stunning creature Prof. Iggnus has brought to the ball?

I say, see how well she speaks. And how nicely she's dressed.

She must be some fine lady.

But why does she sit on the floor selling flowers?

By George, Sache, you've come quite a ways since you used to say 'Gi-dadda here, ya creep.'

Yes, I have changed. Now get out of here, you rather creepy person.

Well, Pickle-stick! I made that slut in to a fine lady. Have I won my wager?

You have won the wager.

You did go around the world in 30 days.

Wrong story!

Yes, Iggnus — you really changed her speech and turned the slut into a lady.

Like I mean my speech got the new sound like I dig it.

Which all goes to prove you can be a fine lady and you still might be a slut.

Well, Iggnus, I must confess you did it — you did it — you did it —

But some of the credit goes to you, old boy. I think you did it.

No, you did it! You did it!

I did it.

STOP! THE WHOLE LOT OF YOU!
Hi viewers—this article concerns live television—

— which is better than ever but still has flaws or bugs

— examples of which are as follows—

HUMBUG presents on the following pages

TELEVISION BUGS
Don't come any closer or I'll shoot!

I've been on this island 15 years, Luavoam and——I haven't seen a ship, a plane, a machine of any kind.

I told you I'll shoot!

I haven't seen the tiniest bit of metal.

BANG!

For 15 years not a single trace of fakir civilization.
Miss Smith: This directive describes our achievements—

-some of the soldest structures in the world, and—you might add we built this very building we're in—

-sold as Gibraltar

Darling, I've wanted to talk to you, but out there—

-with all those people, there isn't a private moment

But now I've locked the door, and at last—

-in this closed off room, we are alone.
Keep moving Belle. In this cold sleep means death.

I can't go on Ski Yukon—my eyes are closing.

—the secret why so many people are burning the Zzzz—

Wait Belle! Look! Mountains! We're going to be rescued.

Notice the action—

—rescued from this bitter cold—

—smooth action—
In recent years we have had such monumental discoveries as Dr. Salk's anti-polio vaccine and the professors Col and Gate's 'Gardol' for fighting tooth decay. And now perhaps the greatest discovery of all. It was made by the eminently weary physicist Dr. Gerald A. Toll, who carelessly cut his finger under his microscope. Summoning what little strength he had, he threw himself forward for a look. Before collapsing exhausted from this strenuous activity, he made a mental note of the unusually tired appearance of his blood. This later led to the development of the miracle drug, Geratoll, which banishes forever the dread thing we call 'TIRED BLOOD.'

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN NORMAL AND TIRED BLOOD

Normal Blood

Tired Blood

HOW MIRACLE DRUG GERATOLL PEPS UP TIRED BLOOD

When the tired blood is dropped on slide it just lays there.

When the Geratoll is dropped nearby it goes to work immediately.

Geratoll's magic ingredient 'togetherseek' seeks to join blood.

Blood hates magic ingredient withdraws, becomes alert, alert.
Then Njoga sprang to his feet and passed out Mallo-mars (a chocolate-covered marshmallow cookie) to each of the Mau Mau. To the wa-Russian he gave chocolate-covered garlic. Then each Mau Mau dipped his Mallomar, and the wa-Russian his garlic, into goat entrails and devoured it, while Njoga had them repeat his very latest oath: "Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones, But Names Won't Disembowel Me."

Meanwhile, a Mau Mau spy came trotting into the camp, running straight up to Kimono he whispered, "Kimono, I have heard that Bwana Parker is coming for you! You had better hide!"

Kimono quickly stopped up goat entrails with the remains of his Mallomar, dabbed his mouth, and ran off into the mountains.

Chapter Three

For seven days and nights, Parker and his trusty gunbearer, Lotheloth, tracked Kimono. In spite of their failures, Parker wondered what he would have done without this sinewy, lithe son of Africa.

The country was shrewd in Lotheloth's soul. He was as much a part of it as the trees and grass, and he constantly amazed Parker with his wisdom of the ways of the wilderness. Lotheloth taught his Bwana invaluable jungle secrets, such as: "Where the sun comes up is the East—To start a fire you light a match—Lions bite.

Whenever they were lost on cold nights, Lotheloth, with remarkable animal cunning, would run into a clearing knee, place his ear to the ground, smell the grass, chew on the bark of a tree, drip sap over his left ear, toss 18 twigs in the air, and then lead Parker off in the direction pointed out by the smallest twig. They'd still be lost, but in this way Lotheloth kept warm.

Their togetherness had a strange, exhilarating effect on Parker. Too long had he considered the children of Africa as wild beasts. But his closeness to Lotheloth taught him a lesson in democracy he would never forget. He grew to regard Lotheloth as the faithful hunting dog he never owned.

He taught him to heel, chase sticks, bury bones, and on warm days he let him walk without a leash.

On their eighth day out, Lotheloth got poison ivy and Parker sent him back home.

On the ninth day, walking his way down the side of a hill in the late afternoon, Parker stumbled on a cave artfully hidden in the brush. From inside came the voices of a man and a crying baby. Peering into the cave, which was lit by a shaft of sunlight that had penetrated the opening, Parker started at the sight of the man who was unmistakably "Kimono!" screamed Parker, leaping at him with his knife bared. Parker landed on top of Kimono and the two of them rolled over and over on the floor of the cave, kicking, hitting, punching, gouging, kicking, stabbing, slapping, mauling, and giving two for flinching.

Now Parker was on top of Kimono with his knee so deep in his stomach that its impression could be seen in the other's back. Now Kimono was on top, clamping Parker's ear firmly in his teeth, then quickly shifting to Parker's eye.

Finally, with one last effort, Parker clamped his hands around Kimono's throat and squeezed. The Mau Mau's tongue came slowly out between his lips, stopping momentarily at the remaining teeth, and then bursting through. As Parker squeezed harder, the tongue came out farther. Parker stopped and rolled the tongue back into the mouth. He had broken to do on Kimono's bones, and the sight of the tongue annoyed him.

As Parker was busily crushing leg bones into slivers and grinding slivers into powder, Kimono's tongue came out, and Parker pushed it back in and it came out. He pushed the tongue in and held Kimono's mouth together, then slowly relaxed his grip. The tongue remained in. He relaxed his grip entirely, the tongue stayed in. Parker smiled and got up to leave, the tongue came out. Parker saw some rope in the corner of the cave. He seized it and wrapped it tightly around the Mau Mau's head and chin and made a knot. The tongue stayed in.

As Parker brushed himself off and started to limp away, he noticed the baby for the first time—undoubtedly Kimono's son.

He picked up the crying infant and slowly, painfully he made his way out of the cave and down the mountain. The white hunter carrying the African babe in his arms into the sunset.

And this was symbolic of the whole situation, the key to the problem of Africa—summed up in a single idea which is simply what is a bwana profited if he shall gain the whole mu-kongogo and the reed that the ku-lala, if he loses his own pumbavu.

A half mile back in the cave, Kimono's tongue slowly came out.
Yes, we are accepting 1 year, 5 year, 10 year & 600 year subscriptions to Humbug .......

I am enclosing $1.00 for the next twelve issues

Name: _________________________________

Street: ________________________________

City: __________________ State: ______

Send to Humbug 5th Madison Ave., New York 22 N.Y.